I'm a Google fan, but there has always been one product that I've been hesitant to try: Chrome OS, Google's desktop operating system that powers all Chromebooks on the market. If you've ever heard anything about Chromebooks, chances are that you've heard the stereotype that it's just a "glorified web browser." I've been following Chrome OS for years and I know that there is so much more to it now? Android apps, Linux support, etc. But I never actually ditched Windows and exclusively used a Chromebook as my only laptop?until now.
