Taking place back in May at the beautiful Skamania Lodge in Washington was Intel's OSTs 2019 for their annual Open-Source Technology Summit that traditionally was internal-only but has begun opening up including allowing external participants this year. I was at OSTs 2019 and it's by far my highlight of the year with many really great sessions and a lot of useful networking at the event. Intel's open-source team has now shared some video recordings from this open-source/Linux event.

- Annual Report 2018: LibreOffice Hackfests [4]

Most LibreOffice developers are working from their home offices, so hackfests provide a unique opportunity to spend some time working shoulder-to-shoulder with their peers. In 2018, LibreOffice developers and community members met at four hackfests in Brussels,

Hamburg, Tirana and Munich.

ICFP 2019 in Berlin ended yesterday, and it was ? as always ? a great pleasure. This year was particularly noteworthy for the quite affordable conference hotel and the absolutely amazing food during the coffee breaks.
