Collier and his team are interested in discovering new Python talent. Early next month they're running a 10 hour 'open source hackathon in London,' for people, "excited about technology and open source software." The hackathon will happen in Man's London headquarters. ?We have an office on the bank of the Thames and a big space on the ground floor that acts as our canteen and looks out over the river. It?s the perfect place for a hackathon, with lots of tables and long benches,? says Collier.
