

No Matter What You've Heard, the Docker Container Ship Is Not Sinking

By Rianne Schestowitz

Created 02/10/2019 - 7:57pm

Submitted by Rianne Schestowitz on Wednesday 2nd of October 2019 07:57:01 PM Filed under Server [1]

According to some press reports around a leaked memo from Docker's CEO to its employees, the open source company that all but invented the container technology boosting cloud growth for the last five years or so is facing hard times. Although the memo does indicate that the company is needing some cash to tide it over or help it expand, the situation doesn't seem to indicate that the Docker container can't weather the storm.

"As shared at the last all hands (meeting), we have been engaging with investors to secure more financing to continue to execute on our strategy," Rob Bearden, Docker's CEO since May, wrote in an email sent to company employees. "I wanted to share a quick update on where we stand. We are currently in active negotiations with two investors and are working through final terms. We should be able to provide you a more complete update within the next couple of weeks."

[2]

Server

Source URL: <http://www.tuxmachines.org/node/128806>

Links:

[1] <http://www.tuxmachines.org/taxonomy/term/147>

[2] <https://www.itprotoday.com/containers/no-matter-what-you-ve-heard-docker-container-ship-not-sinking>