Bodhi Linux is a lightweight Linux distribution based on Ubuntu. Unlike most other distributions, Bodhi uses its own Moksha desktop and focuses on providing you a minimal setup to run on older computers.

Bodhi Linux was first introduced in 2011. It is designed with ?minimalism, resource efficiency, and user choice? in mind. The devs strove to provide a ?system that is functional but not bloated?. As such, it uses the lightweight Moksha Desktop and has only the basic applications preinstalled. The idea is to give the user a stable platform to build the system that they want. It is based on the latest Ubuntu LTS.
