This week I have another exciting new UI element to present: KCommandBar! You might have gotten the impression by my fawning over KHamburgerMenu that we care more about casual or novice users today? not so! KCommandBar is an expert-focused UI element implementing a HUD-style popup that aggregates all of the actions in a KDE app?s full menu structure, so that you can quickly activate features at the speed of thought! It?s like a KRunner inside your apps. You can also use it as a search, if you think a feature may exist somewhere but you don?t know where.

Hmm, does kate have a Block Selection mode? How do I activate it?
