Canonical Serving Microsoft... and a Little GNOME 'on the Side'

By Roy Schestowitz

Created 12/07/2021 - 5:19pm

Canonica and Microsoft: Securing, strengthening, and simplifying your Linux Stack [3] [Ed: Canonical was 'sold' to Microsoft for nothing [4]]

Desktop Team Updates - Monday 12th July 2021 [5] [Ed: This page will make desktop users vomit. It's like Ubuntu development became just Microsoft Windows [6] while IBM kills off whatever Red Hat was doing.]

Hi everyone, below you will find the updates from the Desktop team from the last week. If you're interested in discussing a topic please start a thread in the Desktop area of Discourse.

Ubuntu Developer Still Pursuing Triple Buffering, Deep Color For GNOME [7]

Triple buffering and deep color support are two of the features still being worked on for GNOME by Ubuntu maker Canonical.

Daniel Van Vugt of Canonical has been known for his upstream GNOME work since they switched back to using GNOME as their default desktop. One of the long ongoing efforts by Van Vugt for GNOME has been around deep color support so the desktop and applications will work better with today's deep color displays. Another effort by Van Vugt has been dynamic triple buffering support primarily for when the GPU is running behind in rendering elements for the desktop.

Arijit Kundu: Summer of 2021 with GNOME [8]

GNOME Foundation is a vibrant worldwide community of amazing people involved in making GNOME, one of the most loved desktop environment. The community is not limited to the people delivering pieces of code. But also includes people helping with designs, translations, documentation, management, and much more.

GNOME is built by people, and we value your each & every contribution to help create such world-class free software.

Back in 2020, the Engagement team???the frontiers of GNOME came with the new initiative Faces of GNOME to celebrate all kinds of contributions with a motive of creating a much stronger community driven by passion.

Source URL: http://www.tuxmachines.org/node/153312

Links:
[8] https://arijit-kundu.medium.com/summer-of-2021-with-gnome-c5f79de430e1