- Linux Action News 205 [3]

  SUSE’s new era kicks off this week, CentOS users get some relief, and how Docker managed to piss off their users.

  Plus RISC-V gets a surprising benefactor, and the kernel feature we never thought would get merged that was just approved by Linus.

- Chrome is a privacy NIGHTMARE. - Invidious [4]

- Josh Bressers: Episode 287 ? Is GitHub’s Copilot the new Clippy? [5]

  Josh and Kurt talk about GitHub Copilot. What can we learn from a report claiming 40% of code generated by Copilot has security vulnerabilities? Is this the future or just some sort of strange new thing that will be gone as fast as it came?
