

I ditched Ubuntu for Pop_OS! and I haven't looked back since

By Rianne Schestowitz

Created 19/05/2022 - 1:17pm

Submitted by Rianne Schestowitz on Thursday 19th of May 2022 01:17:27 PM Filed under OS [1] Ubuntu [2]

After getting comfortable with Ubuntu and getting to a point where I could find my way around and install tools that I used, I felt like I was outgrowing the simplicity. I needed something a little more robust, something more feature-packed. And that led me down the rabbit hole many Linuxers know all too well.

There are tons of distros and over the next few years, I hopped from one to another, just trying to have a feel of the developers' mindset and goals when designing the operating systems. I dailied many of the popular ones from Manjaro, Fedora, PearOS, CutefishOS, Linux Mint, and many more.

Linux can be exciting once you nail the basics and know a few tools that cut across these distros. This, aided by the robust community forums out here means that whatever issue you run into, you're often times mere clicks away from a solution. Also, should you not tinker with the system too much, you might never break it at all. That's just how stable some of these distros are.

[3]

OS Ubuntu

Source URL: <http://www.tuxmachines.org/node/165020>

Links:

[1] <http://www.tuxmachines.org/taxonomy/term/37>

[2] <http://www.tuxmachines.org/taxonomy/term/121>

[3] https://www.dignited.com/94330/i-ditched-ubuntu-for-pop_os-and-i-havent-looked-back-since/