Linux and Linux Foundation

By Roy Schestowitz
Created 22/06/2022 - 6:17pm
Submitted by Roy Schestowitz on Wednesday 22nd of June 2022 06:17:22 PM Filed under Misc [1]

Once more, at The Linux Foundation's Open Source Summit, Cardano's chief open source officer Dirk Hohndel and Linux creator Linus Torvalds had a wide-ranging conversation about Linux development and related issues.

Torvalds, who hates public speaking, said that he always does these presentations as interviews because, "I do software. I don't do public speaking." The hindrance being, he explained, "I don't know what people are interested in. So, Dirk asks the questions and, hopefully, if he asks bad questions, it's not my fault."

The Linux Foundation is holding one of its most expansive physical and virtual showcases this week at its Open Source Summit North America 2022 in Austin, Texas.

The event is a staging ground for some of the most important announcements and cutting-edge topics touching open source today.

LF built the Summit as an umbrella for the open-source projects and technologies that are fundamental across software and other industries. It highlighted those that are poised for growth and widespread use.

---

[1] How to Develop an Open Source Strategy [4] [Ed: We're meant to think Microsoft-funded anti-FOSS shills [5] are those who should be lecturing us. That's the "Linux Foundation club"... since when is Forrester an expert in "Open Source"?]
When setting goals and shaping your plan, you also need to set up your organization for success.

- Open Source Technology Careers Become More Lucrative as Open Source Software Becomes Dominant and Talent Gaps Persist [6] [Ed: Pushing the "talent gap" with edX 1 [7], 2 [8]]; edX should rebrand, maybe adX. The employment crisis isn't a "skills shortage" or "labour shortage" crisis but a crisis of underpaid workers whose skills are lied about to lower the salaries further, then laying them off and blaming it on them ("Great Resignation"). In some countries real unemployment rate is about 50%. Linux Foundation is a [front group for billionaires] [9], oppressing the community that did all the work free of charge. Linux Foundation is led by chronic liars who forge/fabricate their qualifications. It's the LIE-NOX Foundation.]

Misc

Source URL: http://www.tuxmachines.org/node/166352

Links: