Steve Jobs' Pixar Animation Studios said today it has received an "informal request for information" from the U.S. Securities and Exchange Commission.

The Wall Street Journal reported today that the request deals with higher than expected returns of the DVD "The Incredibles," which caused the company to miss its earnings projections for the second-quarter.

A rival animation studio, DreamWorks Animation SKG, faces a government inquiry over its projections of sales for the "Shrek 2" DVD.
