Yesterday I installed the Ubuntu 9.10 'Karmic Koala' Beta release by way of the desktop (Live-CD) based installer. The installation was very clean and polished. It has been a while since I've used a graphical installer and I am pleased with the improvements that I found. It definitely rivals any 'professional' or 'enterprise' install session that I've ever seen, and easily beats them in terms of speed and ease. I'd like to give a short review of the Beta release and encourage everyone to try it and finalize any remaining bugs.

Installation

The installation was quick and painless. All of the questions were asked in the beginning and then the installer took over. During the installation messages were displayed regarding the benefits of Ubuntu and the software that it provided. Below are some screenshots of the installation process.
