In all other KDE 4 <insert distro here> installs, if Akregator crashed, I lost all feeds pulled in since the last close. But it appears with Mandriva 2010 if Akregator crashes, the feeds have been written to disk and saved. I don't have to start all over again - meaning, pulling feeds in and going through all of them posted since the last close (which is very time wasting).

<sniffle, sniffle>, I think I'm gonna cry. 🥲
