

Is Oracle Taking OpenOffice.org Closed-Source?

By srlinuxx

Created 20/08/2010 - 3:29pm

Submitted by srlinuxx on Friday 20th of August 2010 03:29:29 PM Filed under OOo [1]

I have written many articles in the past about how much I love OpenOffice.org. In fact OpenOffice is one of the applications that first gave me the confidence to switch to GNU/Linux six years ago. Today I downloaded and installed the latest stable version of OpenOffice, version 3.2.1. This is the best version of OpenOffice that I have ever used from a technical standpoint. However, there were a few things that I noticed that gave me great reason for concern. Based on what I saw, I have serious doubts as to whether OpenOffice.org will continue to be free software/open source in the distant future. Oracle seems to be allowing forces that could be seen as hostile influence, or at least interact with, the OpenOffice community. Perhaps more disturbingly, they appear to be trying to distance OpenOffice from the free software license under which it has propagated for so many years.

The first very strange thing that I noticed is that it appears that the installation forces you to install Microsoft's Visual Studio 2008 Free Edition.

Rest Here [2]

OOo

Source URL: <http://www.tuxmachines.org/node/47247>

Links:

[1] <http://www.tuxmachines.org/taxonomy/term/127>

[2] <http://www.acrossad.org/node/28>