

GNOME 3 Beta: Ever So Slightly More Than a Pretty Face

By srlinuxx

Created 02/03/2011 - 8:57pm

Submitted by srlinuxx on Wednesday 2nd of March 2011 08:57:28 PM Filed under Software [1]

Innovation time on the Linux desktop is right around the corner. GNOME.org is set to release the much-awaited GNOME 3 desktop sometime next month.

I am always looking to play with new Linux stuff. So I put the GNOME 3 beta release to work on my test rig a few weeks ago. The GNOME 3 Beta version 2.91.90 worked so well that I installed it on all of my computers so I can work with it no matter where I am or what system I use.

While I was generally pleased with my test drives of GNOME 3, the more I use it the more I realize that it will definitely create some ill will. Pretty much everything you know in GNOME 2 is different in GNOME 3. Despite the obvious improvements in the new desktop shell, GNOME 3 still needs too many mouse clicks to move around open applications and stored files. That is especially true when I move among the four virtual workspaces with multiple files open in each one.

Full story [2]

Software

Source URL: <http://www.tuxmachines.org/node/51214>

Links:

[1] <http://www.tuxmachines.org/taxonomy/term/38>

[2] <http://www.linuxinsider.com/story/71965.html>