Mozilla's Principal Designer on Firefox, Alex Faaborg, is leaving [2] the company to try out design work in an entirely different space. Before he goes though, Faaborg is sharing some designs from the Mozilla cutting room floor - mockups and design ideas that never quite made it to Firefox.

Most Firefox users probably don't know Faaborg by name, but he's overseen the design of some of the browser's bigger user interface changes over the years, including the Awesomebar, the move to tabs-on-top, the one-click bookmark system and the revamped icon that launched with Firefox 3.
