Following on from the release of Firefox 13 FINAL, Mozilla has updated its developmental branches to versions 14 (Beta), 15 (Aurora) and 16 (Nightly/UX) respectively. After the relatively exciting new features in version 13, what's coming next? How does integrated social networking tools, panel-based download manager and improvements in OS X Lion users sound for starters?

Firefox 13.0 FINAL

Without a doubt the recommended release for most users, as it's the most stable build out there. As we revealed earlier in the week, version 13 introduces redesign home and New Tab pages, support for ?tabs on demand? reloading of web pages when restoring the previous browsing session and a new Reset Firefox feature for quickly resolving common problems.
