You don't often see post reviews / analysis of Linux distributions so I thought I would break the trend and share some of my thoughts after using Ubuntu 12.04 LTS for quite some time.

So, the great thing which I have observed with all Ubuntu LTS releases starting with 8.04 LTS is how well they work (eg lack of bugs and good support). 12.04 LTS is no exception. It is what I expect from LTS releases and what Canonical Ltd aims to deliver, a stable and working product which you can rely on.

In my view that's a pretty powerful incentive for using Ubuntu LTS and even though I havent tried every single distribution out there, I think you would be hard pressed to find a more reliable choice comparable to Ubuntu LTS.
