I used Gentoo for several years a while back, but I still remember the monthly screenshot threads. Gentoo users posted their screenshots to show off their customizing prowess or how minimal they could get. So, it always catches my eye when the Gentoo Website announces their official yearly winners. Today we found out the winners for 2012.

While perusing the list of winners, it seems clear that Gentoo users are still trying to outdo each other with their combination of minimalization and usability.

The first one that leaps out is motoko's Fluxbox desktop.
