

Why am I a freetard?

By srlinuxx

Created 20/09/2012 - 2:02pm

Submitted by srlinuxx on Thursday 20th of September 2012 02:02:56 PM

After having to fix the newly installed Ubuntu installation on a laptop of a friend today (she was missing drivers for her integrated Intel graphics chip, no idea how Ubuntu managed to screw that up), I thought silently to myself: "why the fuck??. Why the fuck do I continue to use and support this broken crap? But then I ignored those thoughts while I was trying to figure out why KLauncher was hanging, Apache was whining about NameVirtualHost and VirtualHost mismatches, and other fun stuff.

Then later, while I was waiting for my dinner to finish, I was browsing reddit.com, and saw this post near the top of the front page. In case you're not in the mood to read some random rant, it's basically a list of pretty serious bugs and annoyances in the software that the author uses every day. The TL;DR from it is probably this quote: "I work for Microsoft, have my personal life in Google, use Apple devices to access it and it all sucks.?"

rest here [1]

Source URL: <http://www.tuxmachines.org/node/58521>

Links:

[1] <http://martinsandsmark.wordpress.com/2012/09/19/why-am-i-a-freetard/>