

FocusWriter Rich in Features, Poor in Others

By srlinuxx

Created 29/11/2012 - 5:22am

Submitted by srlinuxx on Thursday 29th of November 2012 05:22:29 AM Filed under Software [1]

FocusWriter uses an intriguing concept that makes you wonder why other word-processing tools do not offer the same hide-away tool panels to eliminate distractions. It offers a set of writing tools with the ease and speed of unencumbered text editors.

Focuswriter is a full-screen writing program. It has no option to resize or minimize. Its user interface lacks the traditional windows-control icons to minimize, maximize or close the window. This may require some personal workflow adjustments if you multitask or use numerous virtual workspaces on the Linux desktop.

rest here [2]

Software

Source URL: <http://www.tuxmachines.org/node/59050>

Links:

[1] <http://www.tuxmachines.org/taxonomy/term/38>

[2] <http://www.linuxinsider.com/story/76710.html>