

Does Rebellin have a Cause?

By srlinuxx

Created 19/02/2013 - 7:04pm

Submitted by srlinuxx on Tuesday 19th of February 2013 07:04:50 PM Filed under Linux [1]

When I first test drove Rebellin for a section in an upcoming Linux Format, I reported that basically it seemed like a nice solid Debian respin, but many such are for free. It doesn't seem that Linux users gravitate towards the projects that require payment before trying. When I explained this to the founder and, currently, the sole developer, he said that there are indeed reasons why folks should want to pay the $5.

Is $5 too much to spend for a distro that you can't test-drive first? Utkarsh Sevekar says, "email support to all which lasts for the lifetime of the product. There is no monthly/yearly fee here. All included in the initial price. There are no limits to communication either. Customers can bug me as much as they want."

rest here [2]

Linux

Source URL: <http://www.tuxmachines.org/node/59657>

Links:

[1] <http://www.tuxmachines.org/taxonomy/term/63>

[2] <http://ostatic.com/blog/does-rebellin-have-a-cause>