Katherine is involved in a lot of great Linux initiatives. Katherine is also another subject who says her setup is close to ideal, which is always nice, and impressive, to hear. Also, despite the fact that I might seem obsessed with Fuduntu, it's just a coincidence that Katherine uses it.

3. What software do you depend upon with this distribution?

I depend heavily on a small but powerful set of software for my work. Besides Fuduntu, that's Chrome, which links all my stuff together; LibreOffice, where I do all my writing; GIMP for graphical images; tools like Drive and Shutter; and Firefox, which I still use and love. I was a Thunderbird user for many years, but now I'm trying to get used to the Web paradigm. I also use a VPN connection for my work with PCWorld.
