I get surprises every day. Some are good and some less than good. The other day I came across a really good surprise: Netrunner 13.06 Enigma, released on July 5, 2013, turned up just when I needed it.

One of the LA private community members asked, what has happened with Fedora 19 Xfce? Well, to that I say: Life is subject to change. And changed it has. Here's my assessment of the current state of affairs:

Technology Check List

Will Fedora be around in 5 years: Yes

Will Debian/*buntu derivatives be around in 5 years: Yes

Which package manager is best (YUM vs. APT):
