Matthias goes on to point out that Wayland is actually not that hard to find in Fedora either ? while it won?t be the default display server in Fedora 21, it is already including in the upcoming release for users to try out and test. To try out Wayland for yourself, just install the `gnome-session-wayland-session` package from the repositories, then select the GNOME on Wayland option from the session chooser when logging into your profile.
