While Fedora developers did a good job getting out the Fedora 22 Alpha on time, the beta release of Fedora 22 will come at least one week late.

At today's Go/No-Go meeting it was decided F22 Beta isn't ready to ship next week but will have to be delayed by one week at least to take care of unresolved blocker bugs. This beta delay pushes back all future F22 milestones -- including the release of F22 final expected to take place in May.
