

TrackingPoint, the Linux-powered rifle manufacturer, may be bankrupt

By Roy Schestowitz

Created 20/05/2015 - 10:22pm

Submitted by Roy Schestowitz on Wednesday 20th of May 2015 10:22:50 PM Filed under Linux [1]

When TrackingPoint first showcased its Linux-powered scopes with tracking assistance that substantially improved rifle accuracy, even in the hands of untrained hunters, it kicked off a controversy over what level of technology was appropriate for hunting or home defense, and whether the company encouraged irresponsible behavior. Now, it seems that debate is coming to an end thanks to imminent financial failure. While the company's website remains online for now, there's a new header that notes: "Due to financial difficulty, TrackingPoint will no longer be accepting orders. Thank you to our customers and loyal followers for sharing our vision."

[2]

Linux

---

Source URL: <http://www.tuxmachines.org/node/76227>

Links:

[1] <http://www.tuxmachines.org/taxonomy/term/63>

[2] <http://www.extremetech.com/computing/206074-trackingpoint-the-linux-powered-rifle-manufacturer-may-be-bankrupt>