- Getting Started with Fedora ? Update [2]

Some time ago, I announced the "Getting Started with Fedora" handbook which we had published in Czech. I also announced the plan to translate it to English, so that it can be translated to other languages. I asked around who could help me with that, especially to figure out the whole system how to get a translated print PDF from a document written in English. A couple of native speakers offered that they would help with proof reading, thank them for that, but first we need to figure out the whole system.

- Looking for a Community Lead for Project Atomic [3]

One of the most exciting projects I'm getting to work with these days is Project Atomic. It touches on the full stack from OS development to storage, to networking, containers, application development, and pretty much everything in between. Red Hat is working hard on the tools to develop, deploy, and manage containerized applications.
