Translation of the Latest 'Microsoft Loves Linux' Charm Offensive

By Roy Schestowitz
Created 17/11/2016 - 1:07pm
Submitted by Roy Schestowitz on Thursday 17th of November 2016 01:07:08 PM Filed under Linux [1]

QUIT a few additional articles -- mostly puff pieces (below is a complete/exhaustive list) -- have been published since yesterday's blog post [2], which was followed by a short article from Techrights [3]. There is a lot of Microsoft PR inside the news/media right now (more and more by the hour) and it's coordinated (sometimes in advance, based on what we learned yesterday) by Microsoft. Here is a quick rebuttal to the 4 strands of news:

- The Linux Foundation joins Microsoft (not a slip): Microsoft paid half a million dollars for over a hundred puff pieces (in English alone) and lots of leverage over Linux, including a distraction from the patent wars it wages.
- The GNU/Linux crowd gets a proprietary software database it neither wants nor needs: This might be useful when Microsoft tries to infiltrate GNU/Linux deployments like the one in Munich, later boasting better integration with Windows than with GNU/Linux (same for running Bash/Ubuntu under Windows 10).
- Google and .NET: Microsoft accepts that it lost the mobile wars and also lost developers, so it tries ever more desperately to spread .NET and/or Mono.
- Tizen/Samsung and .NET: As above.

That's about all it means. Below is the raw PR, which is intended to sometimes (it doesn't always work) mislead the reader, having misled the writers/journalists. [2]

Related/contextual items from the news:

- Microsoft demonstrates its commitment to open source by joining Linux Foundation [4] [Ed: Microsoft advocacy sites (often paid-for nonsense) like to pretend to themselves that Microsoft is now a good citizen, not racketeer. iophk: ?You've probably seen links about LF joining Microsoft so I won’t add them. It would have been news if Microsoft joined OIN [5].?]

- Microsoft joins The Linux Foundation as a Platinum member [6] [Ed: How MS advocacy sites put it; the larger payment (like political 'donation') was inevitable [3]. To quote Benjamin Henrion [7], "Microsoft depends so much on taxing Linux via its Microsoft doubles down on Linux love, joins foundation [18]
Microsoft joins the Linux Foundation, launches test build of Visual Studio for Mac [19]

Microsoft makes open source commitment with new partnerships involving Google, Linux, Samsung [20]

Microsoft joins Linux Foundation as a Platinum Member [21]

Microsoft joins Linux Foundation, Open-Source development to get major boost [22]

Microsoft joins Linux Foundation at Platinum Partner [23]

After OpenAI Partnership, Microsoft Joins The Linux Foundation To Dive Deeper Into Open-Source Code [24]

Microsoft is joining the Linux Foundation [25]

Microsoft Joins Linux Foundation, Bets on Open Cloud Computing [26]

Microsoft Shows Linux Love by Joining the Linux Foundation [27]

Loves spreads, new Microsoft SQL Server now previewed on Ubuntu [28]

Microsoft joins the Linux Foundation, no really [29]

Linux Academy Partners with Microsoft Visual Studio Dev Essentials Program [30]
Microsoft Becomes Linux Foundation Platinum Member, The Last Leaf has Fallen [31]

Microsoft joins the Linux Foundation, confirms commitment to open source development [32]

Microsoft has joined the Linux foundation [33]

Microsoft Joins Linux Foundation, After Calling Linux a 'Cancer' [34]

Microsoft Drops Tech Bombshell As It Joins Linux Foundation [35]

Microsoft partners with the Linux Foundation [36]

Microsoft and Google bury the hatchet in one small way [37]

Microsoft Joins the Linux Foundation As Everyone Now Loves Open Source [38]

Microsoft is the Platinum member of Linux Foundation [39]

Linux Foundation Gets a Surprising New Member; Microsoft [40]

SQL Server joins the Linux party, new preview comes to Linux and Docker [41]

Microsoft joins the Linux Foundation as a Platinum member, Google joins .Net community [42]
Microsoft joins Linux Foundation that promotes open-source technology

Microsoft SQL Server Supports Linux

Cricket Australia to adopt Microsoft’s team and player performance platform

Microsoft announces association with Linux Foundation with Platinum membership

Microsoft joins The Linux Foundation at highest membership tier

Microsoft Joins Linux Foundation As Platinum Member And Releases Ports

Microsoft Embraces Open Source, Joins Linux Foundation

As Microsoft joins Linux, Google shakes hands with the .NET Foundation

Microsoft joined the Linux foundation as a platinum member because of Cloud Services

Microsoft, Google, and Samsung Bury the Hatchet with New Partnerships

Microsoft, Google, Samsung Team Up In Open Source Development

Microsoft surprises by joining Linux, 15 years after calling it a 'cancer'
Microsoft joins Linux Foundation in another nod to open-source code

Microsoft officially joins the Linux league of open source contributors

After Microsoft joins Linux, Google Cloud joins .NET Foundation

Google signs on to the .NET Foundation

Microsoft joins Linux Foundation

Microsoft?s .NET Foundation Now Includes Google

Microsoft joins The Linux Foundation In Latest Open Source Commitment

Microsoft joins The Linux Foundation; takes on Oracle

Microsoft Joins The Linux Foundation to Boost Open Source Software Ecosystem

Microsoft has officially joined the Linux Foundation

Source URL: http://www.tuxmachines.org/node/95734

Links: